

News

NFMLA to Present Special Film Screenings

By Backstage Staff | Posted April 22, 2016, 2 p.m.BRITWEEK FILM FESTIVALS FILM NEWS L.A. FILM
NEWFILMMAKERSShare: 👍 🐦 📌 ✉

Calling all Anglophiles! NewFilmmakers L.A. (NFMLA) is hosting its 10th annual BritWeek April 23–May 8, showcasing a handful of new and exciting international film projects.

On April 30 NFMLA and BritWeek will co-present a day of feature films, shorts, and documentaries all hailing from the U.K. In between screenings, attendees have the ability to check out filmmaker Q&As and mingle with fellow cinephiles at 1139 South Hill Street. Two entries hail from the InFocus shorts program, while two of the featured filmmakers are part of BAFTA Los Angeles' Newcomers Program. See the full list of programming here.

NFMLA is a non-profit dedicated showcasing innovative films from around the globe since 2007, constantly providing Los Angelenos monthly screenings and discussions. The organization has screened over 1,300 films from almost 70 countries. If you're based in Los Angeles and an avid lover of documentaries, shorts, and feature films, check them out! For information or to reserve tickets to the April 30 screenings, visit NFMLA.org.

Inspired by this post? Check out our film audition listings!