Director Statement

The idea of "SUPER" started with the concept for two friends arguing about whose favorite super hero would win in a fight. This particular scenario I have found myself in many times, with my childhood best friend, my best collage roommate and then again with the character designer of the film.

Over the course of design of the animated characters, Rob Ingram and I found ourselves debating the merits of the animated super heroes and who was the best. It was great fun, and helped with the style of escalation in this film.

Then as we moved into VFX with Tim Latham, It was even more apparent we had collected the best team, for he challenged us even more with the type of moves and which hero was better. It was like my childhood all over again.

We all worked vary hard and vary long on this little film and everyone poured there heart and soul and all of there artistic fiber into this film. I think the final product captures the essence of being a kid and making a new friend, who likes the same things and you, more than anything out there.

So from all of us,

Thank you and enjoy SUPER!

Jacob Keller
Director - SUPER

JACOB KELLER - Director

My greatest passion is seeing the world through a child's eyes, for through their perspective, the most fascinating stories are derived. Having taught, coached, and fostered a love of storytelling through a multitude of after-school arts programs with aspiring young artists, I have experienced first hand the joy kids bring to the creative process. Through many years directing youth musical theater, I developed a passion of working with young actors - creating stories for kids, and by kids. After completing my degree in Directing for Film at CSU Sacramento, I set out with a goal to create quality family entertainment. My past 3 award winning short films, each of which explored different types of relationships kids experience, lead me to write this short film, SUPER. My hope is to create a film/TV series with a positive message for families that kids can relate to, inspire creativity, and to have fun in the process. After all, some say I'm a big kid myself.

“Truly wonderful, the mind of a child is.” -- Yoda.
