

Synopsis:

When a man finds himself in bed with his dream girl, his perversions force him to make the ultimate decision and confront a messy past.

Director Statement:

For this film, I've recounted the many regrettable, consequential bedroom conversations we've all had with a new partner. It's really a timeless phenomenon. What skeletons lurk in your closet, and what happens when they break out? I took these racing thoughts and feelings of vulnerability to a heightened, comical extreme in Pantyboy. We built the situational comedy around creating drama and having the actors play the ridiculous story straight as the world soon expands. This makes the film a fun ride that will entertain comedy fans and disturb just about everyone else!

Alex Szabo - Writer / Director

Alex Szabo began filmmaking at an early age, editing together fun creative shorts. He attended Columbia College Chicago, wrote ads for The Tribune Media Company and dabbled in radio before relocating to Los Angeles. Working primarily as an editor, Szabo has worked for Lifetime, Youtube Red, and on independent films, including resuscitating the previously-shelved David O. Russell feature, "Accidental Love". When he's not writing and editing, you can see him performing improv comedy around the city.

Miles Mueller - Producer

Miles Mueller has always loved making things, especially music and films. After winning a filmmaking contest as a teenager, he realized it was something he could pursue professionally. He went on to study Film & Video at Drexel University and began writing, directing and producing music videos and an award-winning short ("Buddies", Audience Favorite Award & Best Writing at the Five Day Film Festival). He made his way to Los Angeles, working as a production coordinator while continuing to make his own projects and foster others'. He splits the rest of his time in environmental activism and playing in his band, KOALAS.
