DIRECTOR BIO: Maria Alvarez is a 21-year-old internationally recognized Cuban-Dutch filmmaker. She is currently studying Film & Television Production at the University of Southern California, and will graduate in the spring of 2019. Her passions for film are centered on raising awareness for diverse female stories about sexuality, identity, and coming of age. Her films have screened at dozens of festivals such as the Los Angeles Film Festival and Cleveland International Film Festival, won awards from institutions such as Google, and screened in museums like MoMA. Her most recent short film, "Backpedals", screened at the 2018 Festival de Cannes in the Court Métrage and was a finalist in the 2018 Horizon Awards, an all-female Sundance sponsored fellowship. She just worked as a Director's Assistant on "Against All Enemies", starring Kristen Stewart and shot by Rachel Morrison, and just wrapped production on her senior thesis film, "Party of Two".
