Alia Tompkins is passionate about telling stories that provoke thought and change. She was born in the melting pot of Southern California, and then spent years of her upbringing in Doha, Qatar. Her time living in the Middle East ignited her passion for storytelling & crafting an intercultural dialogue.

Alia received her BFA in Film & TV Production from the USC School of Cinematic Arts and strives to create films that present truthful portrayals of underrepresented communities. Her work has been recognized at festivals around the world and her coming-of-age pilot EXPATS was a semi-finalist in the Sundance Episodic Labs.
