HUNG UP

Shattered Texan Latina bull rider Patty "Duke" risks paralysis to ride again.

WINNER OF 3 AND NOMINATED FOR 17 AWARDS
NOW PLAYING IN FESTIVALS WORLDWIDE

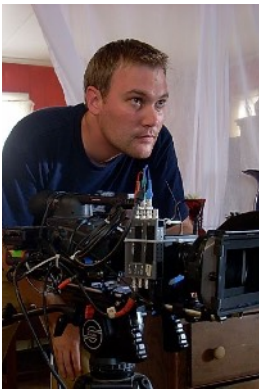

SYNOPSIS

HUNG UP updates the modern-day cowboy mythology to a cowgirl mythology, telling the story of the injured-but-indomitable Patty "Duke," played by Ecuadorian-American actress Melissa Jackson. Six months after a brutal bull-riding injury, Patty "Duke" struggles to handle the pain and to support her hot-headed cowboy husband, until his gambling addiction forces her to risk paralysis and make one last bid at a ten-second ride.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

HUNG UP was inspired after I met Duke Largo Wimberly, a real cowgirl and professional bull rider who allowed me to shadow her and her cowgirl friends as they practiced riding bulls at an old rusty practice ring out in Middle-of-Nowhere, Texas. Together we were determined to update the cowboy mythology to a cowgirl mythology. What I discovered about these Cowgirl bull riders was that regardless of all the injuries they sustained, they yearn for every opportunity to ride. But what if one of them were unable to continue her passion? What would that story be?

DIRECTOR'S BIO

Damon O'Steen is a graduate from the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, CA. The Texas-born filmmaker has directed three feature films, including the apocalyptic thriller DEADLAND, starring Brian Tee (CHICAGO MED), winning best picture and director awards on the film festival circuit. He spent five years directing marketing content for Relativity Media, working with A-list athletes in cross-promotion commercials, shorts, and theatrical ads.

Most recently, Damon wrote and directed PHANTOM NIGHTS, a pilot for Ron Howard's New Form Digital, which is being developed for TV with Campanario Entertainment and John Herrera & Nina Fiore (writers of THE HANDMADE'S TALE).

Patty "Duke" (Melissa Jackson) gets 'hung up.'
