Luis Miguel, a.k.a. “El Sol de México,” is back with a new look and a desire to show the world that he is still buzzworthy. If a fusion of ska and Latin rock is what you’re into, Los Fabulosos Cadillacs will hit the stage at the Hollywood Bowl — just don’t get too excited about a mosh pit there.

If you didn’t get enough of Latino heritage celebrations last week, Long Beach, Inglewood and even the Ford have you covered with a screening of “Selena.” And Lucha VaVoom will celebrate Cassandro, just ahead of the biopic film release Friday on Prime Video.

Here’s a roundup of events happening this weekend.

Appreciating film and Latino icons

NFMLA Film Festival + the Academy: NewFilmmakers Los Angeles will host the 2023 InFocus: Latinx & Hispanic Cinema Film Festival, which celebrates diversity and spotlights communities of filmmakers from all over Latin America. The full-day event will include four short film programs and audience Q&As with emerging filmmakers from Brazil, the Dominican Republic, Mexico, Argentina, Bolivia, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, Puerto Rico, Spain, Venezuela and the United States. Moderators include The Times’ Steven Vargas and De Los contributor Carlos Aguilar.

When: 1 to 10:30 p.m. Saturday
Where: Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences, Pickford Center, 1313 Vine St., Los Angeles
Admission: Tickets available starting at $10.

L.A. is too big for us to know about all the events happening this weekend. If we missed something you think we should know about, let us know.
